Gentlemen:

Today I received a genuine shock...in the form of an invitation from London, England...to appear at a three-day conference (parascience) at which "leading European and North American scientists" (see enclosed form which was enclosed with the letter of invitation) will appear and lecture, and read their papers.

The invitation has been issued...because of my solid, documented work in the field of the paranormal...in spite of the fact that I am not a scientist...and in spite of the fact that I am linked with the subject of aliens. Most frankly, I believe that I can contribute extremely important factual data to this Conference...not obtainable elsewhere for the simple reason that I am the only human in the world who has done what I have done, and am doing.

~~Now~~ Now, to the point. To reach this Conference, and return... someone somewhere must provide the ~~XXXX~~ funds for it. Round trip airplane ticket from Norfolk to London and back, and enough cash to stay the three days in London. Possibly you may know of some organization, or philanthropist, financially able and willing to supply the above.

In spite of the fact that I can literally accomplish miracles... yet I have no funds, and just squeak by, barely, my monthly bills. So, finding an "angel" to back this trip is an absolute necessity.

Also, I believe that my appearance at this Conference...is an absolute necessity...because I have much invaluable information to impart within the framework of such a scientific gathering.

Believe me when I tell you...that my paper would be one of the most important papers read at that Conference. And only I could deliver the paper, personally.

Sincerely,

Ted Owens (PK Man)

Dear Ted Owens,

I have just received news about your work for Susanne Skibing and she has suggested you as a speaker at the Conference. I go along with this wholeheartedly. She tells me that you are interested in working with John Taylor who is also speaking at the Conference, in creating certain phenomena, and also that you've worked with Russell Targ who is one of our readers, and Harold Puthoff.

Will you let me know ^{as soon as possible} whether you'd like to participate, with approximate details about the contribution you'd like to make so that I can put it in the programme?

It looks like being a creating Conference of a rather novel type since reputable parapsychology organisations have been charged about identifying too closely with space intelligence and communication ideas. But this subject definitely needs an airing in a suitable scientific context and this is what we aim to do.

Yours sincerely,

Peter Maddox

INSTITUTE OF PARASCIENCE CONFERENCE 1976

Dear

This year's conference is to be held at the Oliver Thompson Lecture Theatre, The City University, Northampton Square, London, EC1V 4PB, England during three whole days on the weekend August 27-29.

Overnight accomodation and restaurant meals are available at the University from Thursday night on.

Papers on theoretical, experimental and observational aspects of the following topics are due to be presented by leading European and North American scientists:

- (i) QUANTUM PHYSICS AND BIOSCIENCES ASPECTS OF ESP AND PK
- (ii) THE PROBLEM OF CONSCIOUSNESS AND ITS ALTERED STATES
- (iii) COSMIC INTELLIGENCE AND COMMUNICATION

There will also be an exhibition of experimental equipment and results, books, as well as film and video-tape presentations.

LIST OF SPEAKERS

The list overpage includes speakers with whom arrangements are already definite (✓), and those which are still tentative or being negotiated.

If you are among the latter we should be most grateful if you can give us a decision as soon as possible whether you will be able to contribute or not.

Parascience conferences are extremely lively affairs which generate a good deal of useful discussion between participants both in formal and informal sessions, and the facilities at The City University are excellent, with a capacity for 300 delegates.

We very much hope that you will be able to attend. If so I should be grateful if you can let me know as soon as possible the title of your paper and its approximate length, which day you would like to present it, what floor or table space you will need for any exhibits you wish to show, and the specification of your film or video tapes so that we can lay on the appropriate projector.

These details will then be included in the conference programme to be mailed out in May.

ADDITIONAL REMARKS

Yours sincerely,

Peter Maddock

TO MY SCIENTISTS....Dr. Max Fogel; Drs. Targ and Putoff; Dr. Sprinkle; Dr. Hynek.

One of my "disc people" Guy Harwood just sent me some information ..most revealing.

On sheet #1...you will see a sign that was witnessed by a ~~XX~~ Belgian on a UFO. You all know my sign...a circle with a bar intersecting it... and a lightning flash beneath it. This almost same sign...on a UFO... is most revealing!

On sheet #2...see 1; seen by a policeman on a UFO in New Mexico. Now, if you REVERSE the bottom line and bar...you can put together MY SIGN...fitted against the top half-circle...with an arrow (or ~~XXXXXXXXXX~~ lightning) coming from the bottom. I.e., my disc insignia. Same sheet, #2, no. 2, note the letters "HU"...explained by Mr. Harwood as the "universal name for the Supreme Intelligence/Creator.

I have long told ~~up~~ you....and others...that my work deals with what are called the "angels" in the Bible...who ~~at~~ work directly for the Creator (God)...and this all ties in.

The SI's (spatial intelligences for whom I work) are fond of "speaking" by doing things...like leading a series of police cars to "Freedom, Pennsylvania"...a town. They were saying, in effect, that they could lead the human race to freedom, if permitted. In exposing their craft in different places to different people...they have indicated that they are connected with me, and my insignia.

Further...on pages 3 and 4...find an article published..."Is Some Alien Force Tampering With The Weather?"

Now...you all know very well...that I have been "tampering with the weather"...connected with aliens...since 1952. Making and guiding hurricanes; creating storms and rainstorms; making lightning strike selected areas, etc.

Finally (pardon this typewriter...it is for the birds, but it is all that I have to work with)...I enclose an article that you already have in your files...but which you should look closely at once again...combined with this file.

Sincerely,

Is Some Alien Force Tampering With The Weather?

"...Geoffrey stood at the parapet in his gold robe and thought of rain.

"All day the island had slumbered in the sun. It was warm, and above it the warmed air rose, sucking in winds off the western ocean, disturbed winds heavy with wetness, only just holding their moisture over the smooth, tepid sea. And now meeting the land, already cool with night, cooler now, cooler still and the hills reforming the clouds, jostling them together, piling them up, squeezing them till the released rain hisses into the hills' sere grasses. Now trees drip, leaves glisten in faint light, forgotten gullies tinkle. Rain, swathed, drumming...

"...The last rain had gone, and starlight glistened in every puddle and drip. It was very cold already. He thought of frost..."

Excerpt from The Weathermonger by Peter Dickinson (copyright 1968-69 by Peter Dickinson). Published by DAW Books in arrangement with Little Brown & Co., Boston, Mass.

In 1955 the late Morris K. Jessup completed and had released in hard-cover form his now infamous book, The Case For The UFO (Citadel Press, New York). One area which Jessup explored in some detail was the topic of bizarra weather. This included such occurrences as freak storms, columns of water falling from the skies (a phenomenon other than rain), and cloud-like formations which fit no natural meteorological pattern then (or presently) known.

Jessup's basic premise was that mysterious visitors from the stars were causing these various incidents, and he went to some length to back up his belief with vivid examples. Let's examine this more closely...

The person on the street is, as Jessup correctly observed, overly familiar with normal meteorological phenomena. Enough so to be immediately alarmed and astonished if something out of the ordinary appears on the horizon.

On the afternoon of April 26, 1812 in the vicinity of Laigie, Normandy, something odd apparently did present itself. Jessup noted that a "fiery globe of a very brilliant splendor" sped through the air, followed closely by "a violent explosion" which lasted several seconds and was "heard for thirty leagues (about 90 miles) in all directions."

On the heels of this came several "reports like those of cannons," in turn followed by "discharge...resembling musket fire" and a "dreadful rumbling" similar to someone beating a drum. On a whole, this sounds quite like a meteor entering the Earth's atmosphere. But consider what occurred next...

Observers noticed "a small cloud of rectangular form" hovering overhead, and it was from the cloud that the rumbling sounds were issuing. Jessup related that "the vapor of which it (the cloud) was composed" was propelled from the sides of the rectangle by the various explosions.

The end of these goings-on came rather dramatically as, accompanied by "a hissing sound," stones showered onto the land. However, it should also be pointed out that the source of documentation for this report is not given in Jessup's book.

An exceedingly odd occurrence which Jessup described and which was backed up by a documented source is the report of a strange cloud by the crew of the vessel Lady of the Lake. The account was recorded in the ship's log by Captain F.W. Banner, and later recounted in the Journal of the Royal Meteorological Society, from which Jessup, in turn, drew his information.

The incident occurred on March 22, 1870, while the Lady lay at a position of five degrees 47' north latitude, 27 degrees 52' west longitude. Jessup relates that the crew said the cloud was of "circular form" enclosing a "semicircle divided into four parts," with a central dividing line of some sort "starting at the center of the circle," but which reached beyond the limits of the form, then "curving backward, like a hook."

The inference Jessup drew from this description, if accurate, is that the cloud wasn't a cloud at all, but an object of mechanical or organic structure. Jessup's deduction warrants merit, especially if we consider that sailors aren't the fantasy-prone people they're generally believed to be. Moreover, by trade sea-faring men are often exceptional observers of detail.

Another, and in this case deadly, occurrence involving abnormal clouds was also recorded by Jessup, but originally was cited by John P. Bessor in the March 1954 issue of Fate. The event took place over the town of Saw Mill Run, near Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Basically, this is what happened:

On July 28, 1874, villagers and residents of the area around Saw Mill Run watched as on the northwestern horizon a black cloud appeared. From over the southwest horizon appeared another black cloud. However, neither was of an ordinary appearance inasmuch as they were respectively ringed in what was referred to as "a scarlet belt."

Bessor notes that the clouds drew near one another "like two men-of-war approaching the scene of battle." Lightning discharged from them and the effect was akin to "an eerie sea battle high in the air."

The clouds ultimately collided, causing rain to literally pour from the sky, and in the final analysis one hundred and fifty persons were believed dead or drowned. No one has yet explained the event as per standard meteorologies.

The idea of "controlled" weather (or weather-like) phenomena was obviously of keen interest to Jessup, but it's nevertheless a hard concept to grasp. Humanity has a natural tendency to shy away from such prospects, especially if one considers that, as Jessup believed, an alien intelligence may be involved. The weather, after all, is a key factor in our daily existence and who or whatever controlled it might conceivably dominate the planet.

While this sounds a bit too much like a thinly-worm science fiction plot, it's still interesting that other investigators of the paranormal have, over the years, also been struck by an eerie feeling which says the weather is not always as unfettered as it appears to be.

In a personal communication to the author dated Sept. 25, 1975, UFO historian/writer Lucius Farish comments on Jessup's interest in such occurrences. He also notes that: "There are some pretty weird reports of anomalous clouds and storms. I've even seen a weather satellite photo of a square (emphasis his) cloud system which spawned numerous tornadoes in Oklahoma and other states several years ago."

On the surface, phenomena such as this might easily be taken for granted. Yet consider the unlikely origin of a square cloud system, let alone the other anomalous meteorological occurrences cited earlier. Are such instances chance alone? Somehow, it seems doubtful...

In 1972 Hurricane Agnes swept up from the South Atlantic, destroying homes and drowning vast areas of land under a deluge of rainfall. When the storm front reached the East Central States meteorologists predicted that its effects would begin to ebb and the storm return to sea. Instead, as if mocking man's best efforts at prediction, the bulk of the front began to reform and eventually settled into a spiral pattern over the Eastern states. Hour after hour water fell on New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and the Virginia's. In due course the storm expired itself and did return to open sea. However, the damage to East Central America was almost without precedent.

Although they occurred three years apart, tropical storms Agnes and Eloise followed in each other's path almost directly. Many seasoned weathermen devoutly maintain the impossibility of such a phenomenon. A host of "natural element" experts are convinced that whoever controls our weather can also control our planet. They are alarmed at the many freak storms, columns of water - other than rain falling from our skies - and an array of cloud-like formations fitting no known pattern.

Experts termed Agnes "the one hundred year flood," and regional governments were directed to establish within their boundaries what is today called The one hundred year flood zone. This, in effect, is any area which received the most severe flood damage during Agnes' onslaught and which is prone to such flooding during the next severe tropical storm conceivably only to arrive after another one hundred years, the average return time for such occurrences.

They were all fooled. During the last week of Sept. 1975, Hurricane Eloise swept northward, following almost directly the path which Agnes had cleared three years prior. Landowners still recovering from the effects of Agnes were forced to watch the flood waters rise once again.

Repetition followed repetition as meteorologists announced that conditions would never duplicate those of 1972. They also cited that the storm would "blow itself out" and return to open sea. Once again the front did the unexpected by beginning a swirling cycle over East Central America. Again, damage was extreme although perhaps not quite as bad in areas as during Hurricane Agnes.

Most readers are already familiar with the details of all this. However, the point is why did two tropical storms follow each other so closely, approximating each other in direction of travel and severity to such an obvious degree?

This question leads to others, none we have any real answers for. Perhaps Peter Dickinson was correct when he described in his novel The Weathermonger, that certain forces may be able and willing to mentally direct or control meteorological phenomena (such as a storm?) But this is merely another question. Let's hope answers are forthcoming before it may be too late. □

Dear Ted:

Two years ago you made a prediction in words revealing that it will seem that the forces of nature was angry at man.....great earthquakes ...floods...storms...and what have you in nature. What has the news been past year or soterrible earthquakes,,, floods..hurricanes etc.

Enclosed is a copy of an article that may be of interest to you....IS SOME ALIEN FORCE TAMPERING WITH THE WEATHER? No doubt you can answer that question in the fullest of explanation.

Also are a couple of pages from July 1976 Official UFO magazine showing designs/symbols etc., that have appeared on flying saucers. Note one is similar to your Red Disc. One has the English letters HU...which is the universal name for the Supreme Intelligence/Creator.

At 11:00 p.m. one night in 1957, Haskell Raper was driving on the last mile to his home in Provencal, Alabama. It had been a long, lonely ride from his welder's job in Shreveport, Louisiana and he was anxious to get home. Despite the rain and wet

The glare of the beam almost blinded him, but he could still see the outline of the object as his car came to a dead stop 15 feet from it. He noticed it was football-shaped, about 15 feet long and about 9 feet high. He saw a fringe, or extended border, around it

Gary Chopic observed this design on the side of a triangular-shaped UFO in California's Simi Valley in October of 1973.

These geometric markings—in red—were seen by Patrolman Lonnie Zamora on the hatch of a large UFO that landed near Socorro, New Mexico in April of 1964.

In the San Bernardino Mountains one misty evening in February, 1954, A.P. Wheeler, a mechanical engineer, observed these markings on the hatch of a landed UFO (top). Eighteen months later, in Arizona, he saw another UFO with similar insignia.

"A tobacco pipe with a mark through the top" was how a Tennessee man described the odd insignia on a UFO that resembled a "Dutch wooden shoe." It hovered a few feet above his garden before flying away.

Three boys who observed an object a short distance offshore at Cape Canaveral in June of 1966 agreed that it carried these markings.

Now the object rose slowly into the upsetting mystery stands out today: what did the English language-type inscription mean? Did the familiar "UN" mean the saucer was Earth-made?

Is it possible that Raper's mind, shocked and surprised by the sudden meeting, distorted an alien inscription into something reassuring and familiar from Earth? Or did the intruders deliberately camouflage their vehicle with counterfeit lettering to make us think it was of our manufacture?

In our recent past UFOs have overflowed and landed near witnesses who got clear, close views of their details. Several objects were marked with symbols or insignia and many witnesses have photographed or ac-

On the underside of a UFO photographed along a coastal road in 1959 by Helio Aguiar of Salvador city, Brazil, these three markings were clearly revealed.

If the UFOs through the ages have not been mysterious enough in themselves, they have further confounded their purpose with the mysterious markings seen on their surfaces. Although certain of the symbols resemble Earthly ones, none appear to be identical. Yet, they must mean something to someone. But what? And to whom? They have
